INTRODUCTION.

In connection with the history of Bristol, the value of this "Poor Book" (hitherto unpublished), relating to the Tithings of Westbury-upon-Trym, Stoke Bishop and Shirehampton, can scarcely be overestimated; for it is the only book which can give the information it contains, in reference to a district which is now the largest "residential" part of Bristol, and which also embraces the recently-opened magnificent dock at Avonmouth, part of the Tithing of Shirehampton.

This book deals with disturbed or unsettled periods of English history, for it runs from A.D. 1656 to 1698, a period embracing part of the Protectorate (1653–9), the restored Commonwealth (1659), the reign of Charles II (1660–85), the reign of James II (1685–88), and of William and Mary to 1689.

Westbury had suffered very heavily from the Civil Wars, for the College buildings (which Bishop Carpenter, with the aid of Dean Canynges, had so splendidly erected in A.D. 1447) were almost destroyed. We are told that on Sunday, July 23rd, 1643, Prince Rupert, who was on his way to Bristol, fixed his quarters at Westbury College. Before leaving he set fire to the buildings, in order to prevent their occupation by the Parliamentary forces. All that now remains of the original buildings is a massive square tower (the twin of the one built by Bishop Carpenter at Hartlebury Castle and destroyed by the eighteenth-century bishops) and two small towers, together with a small portion of the west front and of the boundary walls of the Trym. [1]

The parish church (which in a monastic or collegiate form had existed since about A.D. 715) also suffered great damage, [2] yet for the most part life during this period went steadily on in the three tithings: the parish business was quietly and regularly performed, and the tending and relief of the poor carefully and, in a measure, sympathetically given. Still there are a few items showing that the times were times of difficulty and unsettlement.

These three tithings, i.e. the ancient parish of Westbury-on-Trym, [3] now form an integral part of Bristol, having been included in 1904.

[1] Cf. p. 19 in Some Chapters in the Ecclesiastical History of Westbury, by the present writer.

[2] Ibid., p. 10.

[3] It is necessary to remember that Westbury parish extended, roughly speaking, from the top of the present Park Street to Henbury Hill; and from Avonmouth (Shirehampton) to Horfield.

So it will be of interest, before we examine the assessments in this book in reference to the tithings, to glance at the population of Bristol in the seventeenth century. A letter by Mr. J. Landfear Lucas, of Hinehead, in the Standard of November 1st, 1909, puts the matter very clearly in the form of a comparison of Norwich with Bristol:—

> "In connection with the visit of His Majesty to Norwich, surprise has been widely expressed that no English king had visited that city, until last Monday, since Charles II in 1671; and this is the more to be wondered at seeing that Norwich occupied then, and for long after, so prominent a position in this country.
> "On a discussion taking place lately between some members of a London livery company as to the relative importance of Bristol and Norwich in the seventeenth century, I consulted the town clerks on this point, and their replies may be of interest.
> "Mr. Edmund J. Taylor, Town Clerk of Bristol, writes:—
> "'I cannot ascertain from our records what was exactly the population of Bristol in the reign of Charles II, but Lord Macaulay, in his History of England, states that Bristol and Norwich were equal in population, with 29,000 each.'
> "Mr. Arnold H. Miller, Town Clerk of Norwich, writes:—
> "'The result of the inquiries I have made of the honorary archivist of the city is that there is no record belonging to the city giving the population of Norwich in the reign of Charles II. The honorary archivist computes it at about 25,000 at the beginning of the reign (1660), and about 27,000 at the close of it.'
> "Macaulay tells us that Bristol had, in 1685, 5,300 houses, and estimates the population at about 29,000. Norwich, he says, in 1693 had between 28,000 and 29,000. He describes them, after the capital, as the first English seaport and the first English manufacturing town, and of Norwich he remarks that no place in the kingdom, except the capital and the universities, had more attractions. It had, moreover, a court in miniature, the old palace of the Dukes of Norfolk being said to be the largest town house in the kingdom, out of London."

In the first assessment in this book—it is for the year 1656—we find the following number of persons were rated for the relief of the poor:—

For the Tithing of	Westbury	32	persons.
,, ,,	Stoke Bishop	36	,,
,, ,,	Shirehampton	41	,,
	Total	109	,,

The Rate was three-halfpence in the pound, and produced from Westbury,

£5 os. 4½d. ; from Stoke Bishop, £5 8s. 6d. ; and from Shirehampton £5 12s. 4½d. So the total for the three tythings was £16 1s. 3d.

In the last assessment (A.D. 1697) given in the book we find :—

For the Tithing of	Westbury	39 persons.
,, ,,	Stoke Bishop	38 ,,
,, ,,	Shirehampton	42 ,,
	Total	119 ,,

The Rate was eightpence in the pound, and produced from Westbury, £27 10s. 4d. ; from Stoke Bishop, £30 14s. 8d. ; and from Shirehampton, £23 15s. 0d. The total for the three tythings being £82.

So from 1656 to 1697 there was an increase of ten persons assessed for the relief of the poor, and also a slight increase in the total value of the assessment.

Taking the total number of persons rated in 1697 in the three tithings, viz. 119, and allowing five persons for each household (perhaps a little above the average number, judging from Atkyns, quoted below) we find the whole population to have consisted of 595 persons.

Atkyns[1] in 1712 states : " There are one hundred and forty houses in this parish, and about six hundred and fifty inhabitants, whereof thirty are freeholders.

" Yearly	Births	23
	Burials	22 "

The enormous change which has taken place in these three tithings will be seen from the following figures :—

The population of Bristol at the commencement of 1909 was estimated at 372,785, to which number the area, which composed these three tithings at the period with which our book deals, contributed (roughly) the following :—

Westbury	30,487
Stoke Bishop	1,629
Shirehampton	6,000
Total	38,116

Therefore the number of the houses and population of these tithings now exceeds the total number of the houses and population of the whole of Bristol in the reign of Charles II.

The names of the persons, mentioned in the assessments, are full of local interest, and it is interesting to find that many of those names still continue prominent in Bristol. Stoke Bishop then, as now, was a favourite place of residence for Bristol merchants and of knights and baronets. Cf. page 183.

In considering the expenditure of the Poor Rate, it will be seen that each tithing appointed at the parish vestry its own overseer, and was responsible for its own poor.

Blackstone[1] gives the following instructive account of the origin of tithings :—

> " The civil division of the territory of England is into counties, of those counties into hundreds, of those hundreds into tithings or towns ; which division, as it now stands, seems to owe its original to King Alfred, who, to prevent the rapines and disorders which formerly prevailed in the realm, instituted tithings, so called from the Saxon because ten freeholders with their families composed one. These all dwelt together, and were sureties or free pledges to the king for the good behaviour of each other, and if any offence was committed in their district they were bound to have the offenders forthcoming ; and therefore, anciently, no man was suffered to abide in England above forty days unless he were enrolled in some tithing or decennary. One of the principal inhabitants of the tithing is annually appointed to preside over the rest, being called the tithing-man, the head-borough (words which speak their own etymology), and in some counties the borsholder, or borough's-ealder, being supposed the discreetest man in the borough, town or tithing.
> " Tithings, towns or vills[2] are of the same signification in law, and are said to have had, each of them, originally a church, and celebration of divine service, sacraments and burials, though that seems to be rather an ecclesiastical than a civil distinction."

The value and purchasing power of money at the time of these accounts are difficult to estimate.

From Professor Thorold Rogers's History of Agriculture and Prices we find :—

[1] Cf. his Commentaries, 1809, i, 113.

[2] In the 13 and 14 Car. II, c. 12, which provides that when a parish is so large that it cannot have the benefit of overseers and provision for the poor, appointed by the 43 Eliz., c. 2, two overseers may be appointed for every township or village in such parish.

" The average price of wheat, 41s. 11¼d. a quarter ; malt, 22s. 2¼d. ; oatmeal, 52s. 11d. ; beef, 3s. 5½d. the stone of 14 lb., or nearly 3d. a pound ; mutton and pork, ditto ; butter, a little over 6d. a pound. [It is probable that the peasants had a cow, as the Irish cottiers now have, and so would not need to purchase butter.]

" Now if we allow a family two quarters of wheat, two of malt and one of oatmeal yearly, the cost at the above prices comes to £9 1s. 2d. The rent of his cottage and garden will not be less than 6s. a quarter, or 24s. a year, and the fuel of his household at least 26s. yearly. This brings up the necessary charges to £11 11s. 2d. Four pounds of meat weekly raises the sum to £14 3s. 2d. The annual cost of tools is set by Arthur Younge at 15s., and of clothing £6 9s. At such a rate of expenditure the wages of the unskilled workman are insufficient to meet the cost of living."

So the lot of the poor, and particularly of those in receipt of parochial relief, must have been one of some hardship at the best, while for wayfarers it must have meant great privations. A short consideration of the history and state of the Poor Law will help towards the better understanding and appreciation of this book.

Without entering into the earlier laws relating to the poor, or into the controversial question as to what was the effect upon the condition of the poor of the dissolution of the monasteries, the first enactment it is necessary to notice is that of A.D. 1601 (43 Eliz., c. 2), re-enacting almost word for word the Statute of 1597 (39 Eliz., c. 3), which directed the parish officers to find materials for " setting the poor on work," and also to provide money towards the relief of the old, lame, blind, and others not able to work ; it also directed children, able to do so, to support their parents. This Act formed a landmark in legislation for the support of the poor, and started a new epoch. It defined rateable property, and extended and defined the family obligation to support its members, and also directed the formal apprenticing, instead of placing out, of children. This Act also contains provisions for the rendering of accounts by the overseers. So now henceforward the care of the poor became rather a matter for the State than for the Church.

The Act of 1601 was not altogether satisfactory, and so another Act (7 James I, c. 4) followed, having special reference to houses of correction and illegitimate children : it also dealt with officers and accounts.

In 1630 there was a Royal Commission, and in 1656, owing to the increase of vagabonds, another law was passed.

In 1662 it was ordered (13 and 14 Charles II, c. 12), owing to many persons endeavouring to leave their own parishes and to settle " where there is best stock, the largest commons or waste to build cottages, and the most woods for them to burn and destroy, and, when they have consumed it, then to another parish, and at last become rogues and vagabonds, to the great discouragements of parishes to provide stocks where it is liable to be devoured by strangers," justices of the peace, upon complaint of the parish officers, within forty days after any such person's coming to settle as before mentioned in any tenement under the yearly value of £10, should be empowered by warrant to remove such person to the parish where he was last legally settled, either as a native, householder, sojourner, apprentice or servant, for not less than forty days, unless he gave sufficient security for the discharge of the parish.

Thus arose the law of settlement. But this same Statute allowed persons "to go into any county, parish or place to work in time of harvest, or at any time to work at any other work," if they had a certificate from the minister of their parish, or one of the parish officers.

This Act led to great restraint upon the free removing of the working classes to places where employment might be obtained, and also to subterfuges. Some, by concealing themselves in a parish for forty days, had in times past gained a settlement, but 1 James II, c. 17, had sought to remedy this by requiring notice of intended settlement to be given. But the poor person, giving such notice and being unable to "give security," was generally refused permission to settle.

This mischievous result was sought to be avoided by a certificate of acknowledgment of settlement, and then and not before, on becoming chargeable to another parish, the certificated person could be sent back to the parish whence it was brought (8 and 9 Will. III, c. 30).

This Statute also enacted "to the end that money raised only for the relief of such as are as well impotent as poor, may not be misapplied and consumed by the idle, sturdy and disorderly beggars; that persons receiving parochial relief, and their wives and children, should (under the punishment for refusal of imprisonment and whipping, or of having reliefs abridged or withdrawn) wear a badge on the shoulder of the right sleeve—that is to say, a large 'P'—together with the first letter of the name of the parish or place, cut in red or blue cloth; and a penalty was imposed on churchwardens and overseers relieving poor persons not wearing such a badge."[1]

Such was the state of the Poor Law during the period, with which our book is concerned.

Having regard to the above-mentioned enactments, reflecting the spirit of the times, it will be readily admitted that the overseers of Westbury, Stoke Bishop and Shirehampton Tithings carried out their duties to their poor, with as much kindness and consideration as was possible (which might even now be copied with advantage): and at the same time displayed the necessary firmness to prevent the parish being burdened with the poor of other parishes and parts.

The monthly payments, made to the poor, will compare very favourably with those made in the present day, and more so when it is found, on referring to the "Audit Money Book" (1664–1703), which contains an account of the disbursements of the parochial charities, that the recipients of Poor Law relief were almost always recipients of these charities.

[1] See "Poor Laws" in Ency. Brit.

It may be urged that these " charity gifts " do not show kindly consideration on the part of those, who administered the charities, but that the " relief of the rates " was the main object. To this end points the fact that the Charity Commissioners on December 3rd, 1880, ordered that " the funds of the charities shall in no case be applied directly or indirectly in relief of the Poor Rate of the said Parish, or so that any individual shall become entitled to a periodical or recurrent benefit therefrom." But there is the other side, even though it be not the wiser, which can be strongly urged for the conduct of our predecessors, who lived in " different times," and were in a better position to enter into the intentions of the donors of those charities.

The various entries in our book bear testimony to the kindly manner, in which the wants and needs of the local poor were met. Regular relief is given, and special difficulties are considered: food, firing, lighting, clothing, shoes, hats, etc., are given, and incidentally the prices of materials and labour (cf. p. 164) can be noted. No detail is too small to be attended to, cf. page 298, " Itt paide to Thomas Everatt for taping James Whitchurches shoes 00 00 10d." ; and page 312, " Itt for grafting a pair of Stockins for Henry Jayne 00 00 06d." ; and, " Itt for lengthing Sarah Onions coat 00 00 04." Filial duty is encouraged, cf. page 36, " Geaven to Jane Jeffiries for tending her mother 00 02 00," and " Geaven to Jane Jefferies towards the buring of her mother 00 06 00" ; and page 247, " Payd to William White to relieve his mother in her sickness 00 05 00." Kindness comes out in such an entry as that on page 213, " Given to Widow Vaughon being weake and feeble this year 00 18 06." Care for the children is very marked, as many entries will prove, cf. page 215, " Paid Ellen Squire for the Tabling of Henry Fishpoole at a quarter of a yeare at 1s. 3d. p week 00 17 06" ; and page 300, " Itt paide for a truss for the child 00 00 06." Education is valued and made possible, cf. page 21, " Paid to John Gee for to parrell his son when he went to the free school £01 05 10." " Boarding out " of the parish children is no much-vaunted modern discovery ; it appears to have been the rule, cf. page 213, " Sarah pullins boy 5 mo at 4s. p mo to Thomas Grant 01 00 00."

Great care seems to have been taken in the apprenticing of children, both boys and girls, cf. page 267, " Gave with Anne Williams to bind her apprentice 05 00 00." And if a parent could not provide the whole premium he was helped, cf. page 212, " Paid to William Jones towards the binding out of his son apprentice."

The overseers were careful guardians of the parish, and could use stern means ; but at the same time they showed wisdom beyond the present times, and so knew how to prevent infanticide and suicide, while at the same time defending the sanctions of morality, as will appear from a careful study of the disbursements in reference to illegitimate children.

Some items of relief appear strange, but speak volumes for the kindness shown and the power of entering into that which is often the greatest anxiety to the poor, viz. the payment of rent, cf. page 271, " Itm pd Mr. Lane Goody Palmers house rent 02 00 00." The old lady must have been very grateful, for the value of "home," be it only very poor, is not always considered in dealing with poor folk seeking relief—the "house" can never be "home." In another case relief was given to the old lady, who enjoyed her home till death, and then her things were sold by the overseers for part repayment, cf. page 187, "Moe for goods of Edith Williams when shee dyed 02 13 00." Other unusual items appear, e.g. page 15, "Paid towards the mending of Jane lanes house 00 02 06"; also page 219, "Paid for 3 horse loade of Cole for William Smith 00 03 03."

To help people to start in business money was borrowed at interest from the Charities, and the interest paid, cf. page 227, "To mo pd ye Clark for ye use of £10: £00 12 00"; and page 178, "Paid for the use of ten pounds Gooddy Gyllett 00 12 00." Misfortune also met with sympathy, cf. page 56, "Itt payd to Mr. Davis and Mr. Wasborow for fetching Robert Everat out of Newgate 00 01 09." He was probably an unfortunate debtor, who had been cast into that evil-smelling and disreputable prison near Bristol Castle precincts, and of which Latimer in his Annals gives so heart-rending an account.

Sickness and the claims of motherhood were readily recognised, and unusual items are found, cf. page 271, "Itt pd ffrances Wasborow for ale for Margarett Haskins in her tyme of sickness 00 1 07"; also page 159. The regular medical practitioner is employed, cf. page 227, "To pay ye doctor 01 05 06"; and page 255, "Payd to Chirugion for cureing of Richard Jones Legg 00 10 00." The midwife is also to be found, cf. page 158; and kindly disposed women are employed as nurses, cf. page 266, "It gave to Abigail Parker for tending of Tom Playford in ye small pox 00 05 00." But isolation and disinfectants are unknown or unused, and so it is small wonder that a subsequent entry runs, "It Gave to Abigail Parker in the time of her child's sickness in ye smallpox 00 06 06," the additional 1s. 6d. probably indicating sympathy, in that she has conveyed the smallpox to her own child. Skill, other than that of the recognised doctor, is employed, cf. page 197, "Pd Elnor Cooke for ye cureing Sarah Pullins Legg 00 06 00"; and page 310, "Paid Elizabeth Giles for curring Tants child 00 04 06." The bone-setter is also employed, cf. page 134, "Spent that day that Edward boure bones was set 00 05 06"; and, "Paid the bone setter 00 10 00." But the following suggestive entry comes next, "Paid for a chest and shroud for Edward Boure 00 12 00"; and, "Paid to the Currinor 00 13 04." And yet another catastrophe, cf. page 144, "Paid to the bone setter for him (John Pullin) 00 05 00"; then on the same page, "Paid towards the buring of John pullin 00 02 06."

Great care seems to have been taken with burials, and it could not be written of the deceased poor of these tithings :—

> "Rattle his bones over the stones!
> He's only a pauper, whom nobody owns!"
> Thomas Noel in "The Pauper's Ride."

For cf. page 285 :—

" It Gave to Joane Jones in sickness	00	12	06

Here and elsewhere it will be noticed that drinking and eating were necessary incidents in a funeral, even though it was a " parish funeral " ; but it was probably a " corrupt following " of what was customary, even down to recent times, in higher walks of life.

But when we leave the picture of the life of the resident poor of these tithings (which, for the most part, appears to have been not an unhappy one, although the " branding of poverty grates upon the feelings "—cf. page 298, " Itt paide for the Cloth and makeing the letters for the poore people 00 02 06 "—even though the law so directed, cf. page x), and come to that of the " outside " poor, we are in a different atmosphere. There we find hard treatment, with only just bare consideration in the majority of cases, although here and there a touch of human kindness comes out.

Strangers can on no account be allowed to acquire a settlement in the tithings, cf. page 30, " Itt for riding to the Justice for a warrant for Thomas Stephens being an intruder 00 02 0 " ; page 111, " Spent when we went to Kingsland wth a warrant of disturbance to goe out of the parish 00 00 06 " ; and page 164, " for exspenses sev times going about to warne people for taking in strangers 00 02 06." The very last entries in this book refer to an effort to prevent settlements : " Aug. 27, ' Go by Christmas or to give security ' " ; " Walter Rudge and his wife late of Clifton to bring a Certificate by ye 8th September " ; and " ffrances Osborne and his wife of Blagdon in Sommersettshire now living at ye Gallows Hill ye persons at ye house say they are going away at Michaelmas."

Small sums of money are given to strangers, who arrive with the necessary passes or certificates, and occasionally human nature asserts itself, even though the allowance is small, cf. page 43, " Itt geaven to a poore gent woman wth a pass and 4 children 00 01 00 " ; page 170, " A good minister and his wife in August 00 01 00." Motherhood must be recognised, but no " settlement " can be permitted, cf. page 56.

Some entries speak of the troubles of the times, cf. page 105, " Geaven to 2 seamen that were taken by the Dutch " ; page 203, " It gave several disbanded souldiers that came with a pass party" ; and page 249, "It gave 3 seamen wch was taken in January 00 03 00."

In life the tithings would have nothing to do with strangers ; it was equally so in death, cf. page 205, "Payd the Coroner that sate upon ye man killed by ye fall of ye house at Gallows Hill and wh was then spent upon him and ye jury that sate upon him and given that this pish might not be at ye charge of his buriall 01 01 02."

The deâling with cripples appears very severe, and life must have been very hard for wayfaring children, as there are many entries relating to cripples, cf. page 53, "Payd for carrying away 3 cripples and exspenses 00 01 06" ; also page 64, "Payd for carring away a cart load of cripples and releef 00 02 06." But it must be remembered that they were only being dealt with according to the Statute of Ed. VI.

Legal proceedings were resorted to, rather than allow any claim of "settlement" to be made on the parish (cf. pp. 150 and 310), and immoral characters are removed to prison (cf. p. 212).

Sunday is to be observed as a day of rest, and there is to be no disturbance of the peaceful village Sabbath, cf. page 117, "Receaved of a drover driving uppon the Sabboth day 1 0 0" ; and so 3 Car. I, c. 1, which inflicted a penalty of 20s. on any carrier or drover, pursuing his calling on the Lord's Day, was enforced.

The accounts are kept in a perfectly simple manner : additions, subtractions and alterations are made after the accounts have been made up. If a person thinks his assessment is too high, he quietly refrains from paying the whole, and there appears an entry in the accounts on the part of the collector, "I crave allowance for." All ranks adopt this method, cf. page 286, "It I crave allowance for wh Sr Thomas Cann stoped which was 04 17 06" ; and page 172, "I crave allowance for Sr ffraunces Fane 00 06 08." If rent is due to a landlord from a poor tenant, the landlord does not hesitate to deduct the amount out of his own rate, cf. page 260, "I crave allowance i could not receve Mr: Richard Lane stopt for rent palmer house 2 0 00" ; also page 302, "I crave allowance of Alderman Lane for the rent of Pitt 02 00 00." A poor person does not need to trouble about his rate, and is "allowed" year after year, cf. page 260, "Gills nuosse 0 0 3½." If the rate has not produced sufficient for the year's needs, the collectors or overseers meet the difficulty by advancing the money.

The various handwritings, with their indications of the characters of the writers, are most interesting, but, of course, this is lost in the transcription. Some of the handwriting is splendid, but many evidently sign the book with very great difficulty, while both churchwardens in A.D. 1679 were unable to sign their names, and therefore made their marks. The spelling often depends upon the writer's fancy, or the sound of the word ; so both handwriting and spelling place the transcriber in some difficult positions, from which he is only able to extricate himself by careful comparisons.

The Parish Meetings were held at the Inn, and this, without a doubt, helped towards decency and order; certainly in the treatment of public-houses our forefathers were wiser than their descendants.

There is no difficulty about the provision of refreshments for those engaged in public work, even though they be Justices of the Peace; and these good people would have failed to understand the outcry, sometimes raised, against refreshments for guardians and councillors at the public expense when engaged on public work, cf. page 227, "To Mo paid when ye Justices met for wine and beere 00 13 00."

The office of overseer was served by the owners or tenants of the various properties, and ladies were expected to take their share or find a substitute, cf. page 272, where Lady Yeaman is nominated.

Lime-burning then, as now, was carried on in the parish, cf. page 47, "Geaven to the poore woman at the lime Kills at sev times 00 10 00." Pipe-making was also carried on (but now no longer), cf. page 198, "Payd Thomas Grant of Westbury pipe maker wt due to him in taking Martha Andrewes apprentice 01 00 00." This is in A.D. 1686, but it is interesting to note that in July, 1644, smoking had become so general that the House of Commons imposed an excise duty on "tobacco pipes of all sorts to be paid by the first buyer for every grosse fourpence."

It would be interesting to know, how the members of the Berkeley Hunt, which dates from 1613, would have looked upon overseers whose accounts in 1666 stated, "Itt payd for a fox head 00 01 00." [1]

Legal business was transacted not at Bristol, but at Old Sodbury, cf. page 6, "For going to Sadbury to confirme our rates, 00 02 00"; and, "For going to Sadbury another time for a warrant, 00 02 00."

There is one entry, which points to the breaking in upon the accustomed quiet of the parish, and it is easy to picture the excitement of that day, cf. page 53, "Spent uppon them that kept Christopher Smith in hold a night and day being taken with a hue and cry, 00 03 06." Blackstone in his Commentaries gives the following interesting account of "hue and cry":—

> "There is yet another species of arrest, wherein both officers and private men are concerned, and that is upon an hue and cry raised upon a felony committed. An hue (from huer, to shout and cry), hutesium et clamor, is the old common law process of pursuing, with horn and with voice, all felons, and such as have dangerously wounded another. It is also mentioned by Statute Westms., 13 Edw. I, c. 9, and 4 Edw. I de Officio Coronatoris. But the principal Statute relative to this matter is that of Winchester, 13 Edw. I, c. 1 and 4, which directs that from thenceforth every country shall be so well kept that, immediately upon robberies and felonies committed, fresh suit shall be made from town to town, and from county to county, and that hue and cry shall be raised upon the felons, and they that keep the town shall follow with hue and cry, with all the town and the towns near; and so hue and cry shall be made from town to town until they be taken and delivered to the sheriff. And, that such hue and cry may more effectually be made, the hundred is bound by the same Statute, cap. 3, to answer for all robberies therein committed, unless they take the felon; which is the foundation of an action against the hundred in case of any loss by robbery. By Statute 27 Eliz., c. 13, no hue and cry is sufficient unless made with both horsemen and footmen. . . . Hue and cry may be raised either by precept of a justice of the peace, or by a peace officer, or by any private man that knows of a felony. The party raising it must acquaint the constable of the vill with all the circumstances which he knows of the felony, and the person of the felon; and thereupon the constable is to search his own town, and raise all the neighbouring vills, and make pursuit with horse and foot; and in the prosecution of such hue and cry the constable and his attendants have the same powers, protection and idemnification as if acting under the warrant of a justice of the peace. But if a man wantonly or maliciously raises an hue and cry, without cause, he shall be severely punished as a disturber of the public peace."

[1] Against this early date, which has been claimed for the Berkeley Hunt, must be placed the statement in the Badminton Library—Hunting, p. 28 (1886):—"Some few years ago there was in the Field an engraving of a hunting horn in the possession of the then master of the Cheshire hounds, on which was the following inscription: 'Thomas Boothby, Esq., Tooley Park, Leicester. With this horn he hunted the first pack of fox-hounds then in England 55 years: born 1677, died 1752.'" Beyond this I cannot carry this subject.

The reservation, added by the Justices of the Peace to their sanction of the accounts, provokes a smile: cf. page 313, "3 April 1700 allowed of this account if true Richard Haynes, Nath Wade, Tho Walter."

There is a pleasing monotony about the accounts, and also the names both of the recipients and of those transacting the parochial business, so that the following lines could truly be applied to these tithings:—

"Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife
Their sober wishes never learned to stray,
Along the cool sequester'd vale of life
They kept the noiseless tenor of their way."

Gray's "Elegy in a Country Churchyard."

Yet their vision was not bounded by a narrow parochialism, but an interest was taken in the "larger world," for we find on page 30, "Itt spent uppon the ringers the Coronation day 01 10 00." There was much truth in Charles II's remark: "It is my own fault," laughed the new king with characteristic irony, "that I had not come back sooner, for I find nobody who does not tell me he has always longed for my return."[1] At any rate, Westbury had lost heavily in the late troublous times in the destruction of its college buildings, involving the departure of the hospitable Ralph Sadleir,[1] and in the damage to its church.

[1] Green's History of the English People, p. 582.

This wider interest also appears on page 56, dated A.D. 1666, "Itt payd for making Rates for Royall Ayd 00 02 00"; and, "Spent when the tithing did meet about the Royall Ayd 00 07 06."

The tithings again shared in the national rejoicings in connection with the landing of William III, cf. page 227, "To Wade for ye Ringers and other expenses Wn ye King landed 00 11 03."

There are two buildings, mentioned in this book, of special local interest:—

1. The College, for which the reader is referred to Some Chapters in the Ecclesiastical History of Westbury-on-Trym, where he will find the history of this building somewhat fully dealt with.

2. The Almshouse cf. page 76, "Payd afterwards for mending the Almshouse 00 16 06."

The history of this almshouse is full of interest. The original buildings, which were on the north side of the church, were most probably the work of of Bishop Giffard. The Victoria History—Gloucestershire, edited by William Page, F.S.A., gives the following interesting statement: "It has usually been assumed that afterwards (i.e. after Bishop Simon, 1123–51, had restored the Church of Westbury with its dependent chapels to the prior and convent of Worcester) Westbury was merely a parish church until 1288, when Bishop Giffard founded a College of Canons against the will of the prior and convent of Worcester (Tanner, Notitia Monastica (ed. 1744), p. 142, and Clifton Antiquarian Club Proceedings, iv, 33). However, Giffard's registers prove conclusively that from the earliest times of his episcopate (1268) a dean and canons were in possession (Worc. Epis. Reg., Giffard (Worc. Hist. Soc.), 20, 49, 54, 71, 123, etc.), and indeed that his predecessor, Walter de Cantilupe, collated his clerks to the prebends of Westbury (ibid., 4)." At any rate, whatever was the previous history, these buildings (which afterwards became the almshouses) were in Bishop Giffard's time the residences of the collegiate body, and continued to be so till the time of Bishop Carpenter (1444).

The Victoria History continues: "In 1447 Bishop Carpenter began to rebuild the college on a much larger scale, and revised its statutes and ordinances with the object of increasing its sphere of usefulness (Worc. Epis. Reg., Carpenter, i, fol. 183*d*). He built almshouses for six poor men (Worc. Epis. Reg., Carpenter, i, fol. 231 in 1466) and six widows (Clifton Antiquarian Club Proceedings, iv, 36; Valor Eccles. (Rec. Con.), ii, 434), vesting the right of nomination in the dean and chapter."

In Pryce's Canynges' Family, etc., is the following statement: "In addition to the share William Canynges had in the re-erection of the Benedictine College at Westbury, he built an almshouse also in its vicinity for the reception of poor men and women, leaving lands for its support, as well as to pay £44 yearly to the Sheriffs of Bristol for vehicles to pass through the gates of the town toll free when conveying provisions to his charity, and probably the College at Westbury."

[1] See Letters Patent of Edward VI, published for the present writer by Arrowsmith.

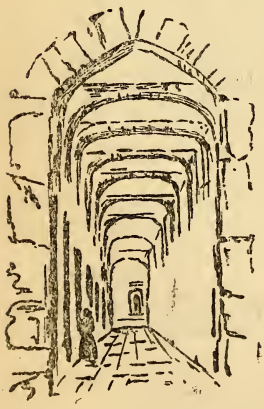
Dr. Harvey, in his Westbury Church, writes: "But it does not appear whether the twelve aged men and poor widows were sheltered under the collegiate roof."

It would seem that Bishop Carpenter, in building his new buildings, (with the aid of Dean Canynge, who was a wealthy man,) for the college did not fetter himself with Bishop Giffard's buildings, but utilised an adjacent site hard by these buildings, but separated from them by a small lane. (See Plan A.D. 1792, in Eccles. Hist. of Westbury.) It appears most probable that the old buildings were made into almshouses for the six poor widows, while the six aged men lived under the collegiate roof.

These almshouses are mentioned in the parish Terrier, dated May 3rd, 1806, viz.: the churchyard is "bounded on the north by certain Tenements belonging to the parish of Westbury-on-Trym."

In 1840 the eminent architect, the late John Norton, wrote, after he had visited the place: "The Grounds belonging to the Monastery (i.e. the College of Bishop Carpenter) were extensive, including the Church and Almshouse, and endowed by Bishop Carpenter for six poor men and six poor women and a row of Buildings, said to be erected on the site of the old cloisters now sometime since converted into eight houses occupied by the poor of the Parish rent free. They were separately entered from a narrow alley in length about 130 feet, and are situated under the north wall of the churchyard." Without entering into John Norton's history, which is inaccurate, his testimony to the existing almshouse is important. He gives the accompanying sketch of the entrance, which is the more valuable, for after patient inquiry and also personal search in the Bristol Central Library and at the Bodleian Library and elsewhere, I have been unable to find any view of Westbury earlier than about 1852. A view, evidently dating before the partial restoration of the church in 1852, has been presented to the Church Museum by Miss Taylor, sometime district nurse. It remains to be seen if any exist in the library of the Earl of Leicester at Holkham, where is the "celebrated and perhaps matchless collection of maps and views in nearly one hundred volumes" of John Innys, who was churchwarden of Westbury in 1764.



The almshouses were no longer in existence in 1853, when Pryce (continuing the statement given above) wrote: "The site of the almshouse may still be recognised by sundry doorways, etc., built up with more modern portions of dwelling-houses, but they are of too insignificant a character to remark."

The destruction of these almshouses about 1852 was quite in keeping with the spirit of that time at Westbury. The old parish clerk, now deceased, told the present writer in 1900 that the reason they were destroyed was because "the people wouldn't behave themselves: they were shut in at night" (the almshouses were situated inside the west gates of the churchyard, which were locked at sunset), "and used to let cans down over the wall and get folks to fetch them beer, and so they pulled the houses down." For such a paltry reason, to which other old inhabitants testify, was destroyed what would have been a most interesting specimen of a mediæval monastery.

All that now remains is the massive north wall, dating from not later than 1288, and the mouldings of a window at the east end of the entrance to the almshouses. Mr. J. B. C. Burroughs (to whom Westbury owes a great debt of gratitude, since he was the first to move in the matter of the preservation of the remains of the college, and so, with others, saved them from the fate of the almshouses) writes October 26th, 1909: "This building was used as a Parish Poor House, and was dismantled and the materials sold about sixty years ago. I had these remains inspected by Sir John Maclean and Mr. T. S. Pope in 1892, who pronounced the details" (these would not include the north wall) "to be of late fifteenth or early sixteenth century, and window with circular head and quaint moulding of same date."

On part of the site of the almshouse was built a small Vestry Hall in 1853 from the materials of the bone or charnel house, which was then pulled down from the south-west end of the south aisle of the church, and which involved a further loss to the church, for John Norton wrote in 1840: "In the Bone house is a Piscina bearing the same date," i.e. Early English, "and an altar tomb of a later character," both of which have disappeared. The other part of the site has been long used as a rubbish tip. When in 1905 a partial clearance was made a portion of a dividing wall was discovered, giving an idea as to the extent of each compartment.

For the notes to the names in the book I am largely indebted to Latimer's Seventeenth-Century Annals of Bristol and to some Westbury documents.

It would not be right to conclude this introduction without expressing our deep sense of gratitude to our esteemed parishioner, Mr. Peter Forrest (Churchwarden of Westbury, 1902–5). When District (or Parish) Councils came into existence in 1894, the civil duties of the Vestry were transferred to that body, who, laying claim to civil documents, swooped down upon Westbury Church and carried off—so careless was the examination of documents or the guardianship of them—inter alia, would it be believed! A Book of Common Prayer (Charles I); the first volume—extremely rare, as it is an undoubted church copy—of Erasmus's Paraphrase of the New Testament, first published in 1523; a large bundle of churchwardens' accounts and two "Poor Books"—the one now under consideration and the other for 1700–29. When Westbury was incorporated with Bristol in 1904, thanks to Mr. Forrest's suggestion, the above documents were returned to Westbury Church, and so we conclude with our best thanks to Mr. Forrest and those concerned in the restoration of those interesting documents.

[1] Mr. Jackson, mentioned on page 25, was Mayor of Bristol in 1651, Master of the Merchant Venturers 1654–5, M.P. for Bristol 1657. "The Common Council," states Latimer, "seems to have been reminded by the election that the 'wages' of the Members of Parliament of 1654 were still unpaid, and Messrs. Aldworth and Jackson were voted £50 each for 150 days' service. Subsequently Aldworth received £138 (including some arrears), and Alderman Jackson £53 for attending the Parliament in 1656–7." For further history of the Jackson family, see Eccles. Hist. of Westbury.

[1] See Eccles. Hist. of Westbury, p. 60. He was Master of the Merchant Venturers 1658, and Mayor of Bristol 1662.

[2] Sir Humphry Hook was Keeper of Kingswood and Fillwood Forests, a vehement Royalist, and was knighted by Charles II. Became M.P. for Bristol after a disputed election, the Earl of Ossory holding the seat till raised to the peerage, when Sir Humphry Hook's claim prevailed. He supported Sir Robert Can in the struggle for the precedency of Knights in the Bristol Council (See Eccles. Hist. of Westbury, p. 60). In 1663, for the King's Subsidy, his goods were assessed by "partial" commissioners at £13, while Sir Robert Can, above-mentioned, who was a wealthy merchant, was assessed at £10 and paid £2 13s. 4d.! He died in October, 1677.

Sir Robert Yeamans, Bt. (p. 50), equipped in September, 1653, the privateer The Robert. He supported Sir Robert Can in 1662 in his struggle with the Bristol Council (see above); gave £60, since Bristol's treasury was empty, towards the entertainment of the king and queen in 1663, during which year he was sheriff; and going to Bath, whither the king and queen had returned after the entertainment, he was knighted. He was Mayor of Bristol in 1669, and was so energetic in the persecution of Dissenters, that he brought down upon himself and his supporters the disapproval of the Council. A very severe struggle ensued, and Sir Robert Yeaman was so traduced to the king that he was detained in custody in London, and was not released till April, 1770. On his return to Bristol "soon after his discharge, he was met outside Lawford's Gate by 220 gentlemen on horseback, who cordially welcomed him, and conducted him to his house amidst the cheering of the citizens. The long detention of the mayor evoked still more general sympathy, and on April 20th he was met in a similar manner by 235 horsemen, and had a joyful public reception," while his accuser, Sir John Knight, was obliged to slink away through the back streets to his neighbouring mansion. In 1675 Sir Robert Yeamans took part in a further attack on Dissenters, and in sending some to Newgate Prison. In 1679 he was again in trouble, in conjunction with Sir Robert Can, for denying the existence of the Popish Plot, and was arrested; but on November 13th, appearing at the bar of the House of Commons "to make a humble apology, was discharged on payment of heavy fees."

Thomas Chester (see p. 54) was a Justice of the Peace, and lived at Knowle Park, Glos. "Towards the close of 1646 the parliamentary tribunal charged with inquiring into the value of 'delinquents'' estates, and 'compounding' with the owners for fines in lieu of sequestration, were actively fulfilling their duties," and Thomas Chester escaped with a fine of £1,000, as the Royalists had fired some of his houses. In 1660, Latimer tells us, that the Bristol Council, "taking note of the great number of the cottages lately erected and now erecting outside Lawford's Gate, and conceiving it to tend to the great impoverishment of the city, directed the mayor and city surveyors to confer with Mr. Chester, on whose land the houses were built, for putting a stop to further building. The district, however, soon became the most populous, as it was almost the most disorderly, of the suburbs." This state still in a measure remains; there are in this district about 1,000 dwellers in the common lodging houses each night, and another 1,000 who live in so-called furnished rooms, let at 6d. a night, while the other population is of the poorest sort. When the writer was Assistant Curate and subsequently Vicar of St. Jude's—the area above-mentioned—"outside the gate" was a phrase constantly used by some of the inhabitants when they considered their "rights" were overlooked by the civic authorities, meaning they were unimportant or considered disreputable, and so of no account.

[1] Mr. Richard Lane entertained James II and his Queen in 1687. "The Royal Guests were received at Lawford's Gate on September 12th with the accustomed ceremony," writes Latimer, "and were conducted to Mr. Lane's Great House at St. Augustine's Back, where a luxurious banquet was prepared for them, and where the Queen was presented with 100 'broad pieces' of gold. Their Majesties returned to Bath the same evening. Their brief visit cost the Corporation no less than £703." Mr. Lane was a sugar merchant, and was Mayor of Bristol in 1688; but on January 13th, by order of His Majesty's Council, and to further the promotion of Roman Catholic supremacy, he with others was dismissed from the Corporation, and Thomas Day was chosen in his place.

[1] On the death of Sir Robert Hooke, M.P., in October, 1677, and as he was heavily in debt, his trustees began to realise his estate, and in 1680 "disposed of the fine estate at Kingsweston to Sir Robert Southwell." When William III reached Kingroad, on September 6th, 1690, on his return from the Battle of the Boyne, he landed at Kingsweston and stayed the night with Sir Robert Southwell, who at that time was Irish Secretary of State.

[1] Sir Richard Crump was a chandler, became Mayor of Bristol in 1677, and was elected M.P. for Bristol in 1685. In July, 1687, the Civic Exchequer was so low that the Council determined that the salary of its Members of Parliament " should be paid as the law directs " —sufficiently obscure to mean nothing. For the previous session Sir Richard Crump had been paid £17 13s. 4d., but his colleague, Sir Richard Hart, had received nothing. This resolution was afterwards rescinded.

[1] Mrs. Rutland was the wife of the Vicar of Westbury, who died in 1660. She lost her three sons : one in 1647, another in 1648, and a third in 1674. She finished the remainder of her sad life at Westbury, and by her will, dated March 25th, 1684, left £10 to be distributed to the poor every Good Friday. She also left £50 to procure sermons in the church on St. Thomas's Day, New Year's Day, Twelfth Day, Good Friday, Holy Thursday and All Saints' Day.
